Unlike Photoshop, which was created primarily for photo editing, Adobe Photoshop Elements is designed to be a stand-alone editing application with as little interaction as possible with the "real" Photoshop. Its interface is especially designed for digital photographers and hobbyists (such as my grandma, with her iPhone). For a majority of users, Elements is the program of choice. I find it relatively easy to learn and use, since there is little obscure language and limited menus. Learn Photoshop Elements You'll learn a lot about digital photography right away: lighting and exposure, correct white balance and other color correction options, the different types of images (JPEG, TIFF, RAW), different kinds of masks (watermark, edge, radial), resizing and cropping images, as well as how to choose the best type of editing for your images. I find that, the more images you edit, the better you get at it. As you progress with Elements, you learn how to use some of the tools and features more efficiently. If you're a beginning user, you can use the tutorial in the Help system to learn more about the menus and basic editing tasks. (That's the program's most useful feature, actually, since it teaches you a bit about editing and how to use the program.) If you'd like to learn about photography using Photoshop, I highly recommend doing some image editing using Photoshop first. Photoshop Elements 5 and 6 are more user-friendly and feature-rich than older versions. The program is also updated more frequently, which makes it a better choice for a serious photographer. The official Adobe website has lots of information on how to use Photoshop Elements and tutorials for beginners. Adobe Photoshop Elements 6 (for Windows, Mac and Linux) is the latest version of the program. Welcome to On The Edge Music! On this website, we offer a huge range of music videos, music apps, and new music. We aim to provide you with the very best quality music videos. We have several featured artists who are looking for new music videos to promote. We also specialize in buying music for your next album as well as finding out where to find the best new tracks. Don't forget to follow us on Facebook and Twitter to keep up to date with the latest new tracks and music videos! Our TV shows are a wonderful mix of music videos, music news, and interviews with major artists. You can watch our TV shows on YouTube. We post the episode links below. To listen to the music, we have a large collection of albums, including: We have a great selection of music apps, games and accessories at Music On The Edge. We carry a huge range of music software, a healthy collection of portable music players, and a wide selection of music apps for the iPhone, Android and iPad devices. We are excited to be partnering with the best music magazines and music websites, including Bandcamp, The Music Boss, The Eargasm, Too Many DJs, The Music App, The Music Lover and more. We also provide a newsletter which notifies you of new music releases, upcoming shows, and music apps, and artists that are looking for music. We are in the process of creating On The Edge Music TV, with a monthly series of interviews with artists, music videos, and music news. We have a great group of musicians lined up to interview, but we would like your opinions on the best musicians to be interviewed. If you would like to suggest a musician for us to interview, please email us at: info@ontheedge.com We are also planning to re-launch On The Edge Music TV on YouTube shortly. We have recently been recognized in The Independent Music Companies Association's (IMPALA) database of the top 100 distributors of recorded music in the world. Localization of type I calmodulin-like protein within the glutathione S-transferase P1 gene promoter. Type I calmodulin-like protein (CaM) is a ubiquitous cytosolic calcium sensor and regulator of calcium-dependent enzymatic activity. A nuclear homologue of CaM, CaM-I, has recently been identified in mouse cells that is located primarily in the nucleoplasm and may be involved in intranuclear calcium signaling. We have shown previously that the gene for this protein is transcribed from the human glutathione S-transferase P1 (GSTP1) promoter, a tissue-specific gene that is activated in response to carcinogens. To identify the CaM-I binding site(s) within the GSTP1 promoter, recombinant GSTP1 regulatory sequences, fused to the beta-galactosidase gene, were used to assay for nuclear factors binding to the GSTP1 DNA fragment through DNase footprinting. Competition electrophoretic mobility shift assays confirmed the presence of two nuclear protein-DNA complexes in GSTP1 promoter fragments. DNase footprinting was used to localize protein-binding regions within the GSTP1 promoter, and subsequently, to map the DNA sequence(s) required for binding. The binding sites lie between -254 and -237 relative to the site of transcription initiation. Surprisingly, neither a putative cAMP response element (CRE) nor a TATA box or CAAT box consensus sequence is present in the region of the GSTP1 promoter that binds CaM-I. However, competition electrophoretic mobility shift assay experiments using GSTP1 promoter-beta-galactosidase chimeras revealed a sequence requirement of the binding site, indicative of the presence of a CAAT box. Measuring maternal nutrient intake: The mother's diet measurement instrument. To develop a mother's diet measurement instrument with the ability to collect data on maternal diets, reflecting common practices in the Mediterranean countries, and to examine the reliability of the instrument. The Mother's Diet Measurement Instrument (MDMI) was developed by applying the theory of three levels of measurement (the amount, frequency and duration) to the mother's diet and dietary patterns. Content and construct validity were assessed in a sample of 87 mothers ( $34.3 \pm 5.5$  years). The MDMI questionnaire included two components: socio-demographic data, food list and 24-h dietary recalls (24HRs). Test-
